PAJAMAS MEDIA LAUNCHES LANDMARK SYNDICATION SERVICE

Pajamas Media becomes first news blog to syndicate its global coverage

WASHINGTON, DC – Today, Pajamas Media becomes the first Internet-based news outlet to syndicate its global news coverage and analysis with the completion of a landmark syndication deal with Military.com. In a news function historically dominated by tradition news wires, such as Associated Press and Reuters, the creation of PJM Wire marks yet another major shift in the world of news content development and delivery favoring “new media” outlets such as Pajamas Media.

“Our syndication partnership with Military.com is a proud milestone for Pajamas Media,” says Roger L. Simon, CEO of Pajamas Media. “It is a testament to our unparalleled global reach and coverage of events and issues around the world. And we anticipate that with the continued growth and impact of new media, more syndication partnerships are in our future.”

PJM’s original and cutting-edge news articles will now appear in the News section of Military.com, a military news and information site that revolutionized the way the 30 million Americans with military affinity stay connected and informed. PJM Wire provides original content from correspondents all across the United State and in more than 35 countries worldwide. This coverage includes news reporting on events as they unfold - in places like Pakistan, Iran, and other regions around the world where the “big” stories are breaking everyday – as well as feature analysis on the timely issues, high-quality podcasts and videos from Pajamas Media headliners including Michelle Malkin, Blackfive and many other members of the Pajamas Media Network.
